1. (RE)ENGAGING STUDENTS FOR SUCCESSFUL LEARNING

Teaching during the Covid-19 pandemic was challenging for everyone. It was also an incredibly difficult time for our students. Many high schools throughout the state and nation remained closed for long periods of time. Students were forced to receive their learning materials virtually – and at times with very little support. Unfortunately, higher education experienced similar difficulties. Now, as we return to a fall semester of in-person teaching, the question around “student learning loss” looms. Are students ready for our classes? Did they learn what they needed to last semester to find success in the content we teach? A recent K-12 study predicted that, due to the pandemic, students might experience learning losses of up to 50% (TNTP, 2020). With this in mind, how can we help our students make up that ground and be successful in our classrooms this fall? What role will we play in helping students “catch up” on their missed learning? We believe it will be critical to provide some support for students as we continue to wade through these uncharted waters and unprecedented times. We will discuss some strategies for helping reteach, remind, and reengage students on their missed learning.

5. FACULTY READS PROGRAMS FOR FALL 2021

The Missing Course: Everything They Never Taught You about College Teaching* by David Gooblar

Teaching commonly registers high on the list of anxiety-inducing aspects of the professoriate (Boice, 1991; Kakela, 2013; Solem & Foote, 2006; Trautmann, 2008). This should likely come as little surprise given that most of us are taught to be researchers during Ph.D work, but few of us are prepared to deliver effective instruction.

Enter Dr. David Gooblar, former Associate Director of the Center for the Advancement of Teaching at Temple University and author of The Chronicle for Higher Education's recurring column, Pedagogy Unbound. Gooblar offers sound advice for those who want to improve instruction.

Caste: The Origins of Our Discontents*

by Isabel Wilkerson

From the publisher:

Isabel Wilkerson gives us a masterful portrait of an unseen phenomenon in America as she explores, through an immersive, deeply researched narrative and stories about real people, how America today and throughout its history has been shaped by a hidden caste system, a rigid hierarchy of human rankings.

Self-Paced Online Teaching Workshop

This self-paced online teaching workshop covers a variety of topics such as outcome-oriented course design, engaging online learners, creating an online activity and assessment plan and more. Whether you are new to online teaching or need a refresher, this course is designed to meet your needs in a flexible format. While working through modules in the workshop, participants will create an Online Learning Assessment Portfolio, which will be submitted to the instructor upon completion of the final module. After receiving your portfolio, the instructor will set up a time to discuss your experience in the workshop with a one-on-one video conference.

Shifting to Online Teaching

With a shift to teaching a course online, instructors need a plan to produce high-quality instruction. To accomplish this, it is helpful to think about key elements of learning as you prepare. For more information visit the Teach Online Effectively webpage.
